

PORDENONE

Immaginario Scientifico's museum in Pordenone is located inside a beautiful industrial archaeology building, the Dye Works of the former Torre Cotton Mill. It is property of the City of Pordenone, and it has been renovated to become a museum.

Inside, colorful and engaging interactive exhibitions allow visitors of all ages to get in touch with science, protagonists of an experience that brings natural phenomena at reach, and the physical laws that govern them understandable. There are six thematic paths: Perceptions, Mirrors, The Logic of Puzzles, Lights Colors and Shadows, Vibrations and Waves, Gravity and Forces, Turbulence and Lightness, Fields and Interactions.

Finally, the installation 100,000 Years in a Sheet of Paper marvelously represents 4.3 billion years of our planet's history through thousands of sheets of paper.

Labs and workshop rooms complete the museum: here different activities are organized in order to allow the public to experiment, make discoveries and "think with their hands."

The goal is for everyone, regardless of age or level of scientific knowledge, to initiate an autonomous process of discovery, guided by wonder and curiosity, geared toward acquiring scientific awareness and citizenship.
